

Statement of participation

Nicanor Gomez

has completed the free course including any mandatory tests for:

What do we mean by digital health and social care?

This free 4-hour course focused on digital health and social care technologies.

Issue date: 2 May 2023

www.open.edu/openlearn

This statement does not imply the award of credit points nor the conferment of a University Qualification.
This statement confirms that this free course and all mandatory tests were passed by the learner.

Please go to the course on OpenLearn for full details:

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/health-sports-psychology/what-do-we-mean-digital-health-and-social-care/content-section-0>

COURSE CODE: K102_2

What do we mean by digital health and social care?

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/health-sports-psychology/what-do-we-mean-digital-health-and-social-care/content-section-0>

Course summary

This free course, What do we mean by digital health and social care?, will focus on digital health and social care technologies. It will explore the different types of technologies that exist in health and social care and the advantages and disadvantages associated with each of them. It will also focus on policies and digital innovations in different parts of the UK.

Learning outcomes

By completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- explain what is meant by digital and health technologies
- evaluate the types of technologies used in health and social care
- identify the policies and digital innovations local to where you live.

Completed study

The learner has completed the following:

Section 1

Defining digital health and social care technology

Section 2

Policy for digital health and social care

Section 3

Why are digital technologies important?

Section 4

Types of health and social care technology

Section 5

Conclusion